A: The script you provided is not valid Javascript. It may be a little readable. Anyway, there are some problems that can be noticed, like the `document.write()`; That is not valid. Also, if you use the `var` keyword within a function, they must be inside a block. Inside a script tag, they must be at the end of the body. It seems that either you are not properly closing the body (very likely) or you are missing a `.` If you wanted to keep the script, you could wrap it in an extra script tag to avoid the error above. Or another error: You are sending a non asynchronous request (lack of a synchronous `."`). This means that your request will be waited for (while the page will not be responsive). That is also very likely the cause of the delay on your page. If you removed the `async=false` it should work. Q:

How to select only rows with `max()` where values in a column differ? I have a table with rows like this:

id	title	weight
1	title1	56
2	title2	64
3	title3	67
4	title4	55
5	title5	46
6	title6	47
7	title7	48
8	title8	59

 I want to select the `MAX(weight)` per id where title has different values. In the given example, I should select the row which has the highest weight but the title values differ. So I only select the row with `id=2` and the `max(weight)` for that row is the highest. The title is different for row 2 (`title2`) and row 3 (`title3`). The complete table has 20.000.000 rows, so speed is a bit important (and too long query is also a problem). The value in the title column is always an int without any case sensitivity (I have run some tests and
